The American Translation & Interpreting Studies Association invites you to attend their sixth biennial conference, “ATISA VI: Teaching Translation and Interpreting in the 21st Century: Research, Methods and Modes of Delivery.” The conference will be organized by the University of Texas at Brownsville and held on South Padre Island (Texas) on March 29-31, 2012.

ATISA encourages, supports, and furthers the study of translation and interpreting studies by disseminating knowledge and research relevant to all areas of language mediation, specifically translation and interpreting, regardless of discipline. Translation and interpreting studies here means the study of all forms of communication between languages, including translation, interpreting, localization, bilingual text revision, cross-cultural communication, and the various specializations, tools, and technologies involved in such activities. Presentations focusing on the act of communicating between human languages from a wide range of disciplines and methodologies, including translation studies, interpretation studies, applied linguistics, cognitive science, cultural studies, ethnology, sociology, anthropology, education, and other social sciences are welcomed. Presentations must follow the standards of scholarship of their respective disciplines, and they must show the connection of their work to Translation and Interpreting Studies.

ATISA VI promises to be an exciting conference where new ideas are generated, disciplinary boundaries are crossed, and research on all aspects of translation and interpreting, from cognition and social action to teaching and learning, is shared.

Translation and Interpreting scholars are invited to submit 200-300 word proposals for individual papers in pdf format. Presentations on all aspects of translation and interpreting studies are welcome. Presentations will be 20 minutes in length, followed by discussion. There will be sessions all day Friday and Saturday. The deadline for receipt of proposals is October 15, 2011. Submitted Abstracts will be reviewed and rated from 16-Oct-2011 until 15-Dec-2011. Authors will be notified of their acceptance after 15-Dec-2011.
